

G56 handles hard going

Trevor Hamblin planted 86G56 this spring as a part of his sorghum program.

Trevor has varying soil types on the country that he farms, varying from Downs type soil , lighter scrub soils and excellent alluvial soil along Theresa Creek. He needs an adaptable sorghum hybrid that can handle the going in all of the soil types that he farms. Trevor tried G56 for the first time this year and is pleased with how the new variety is performing.

Where the going is good it is looking excellent, however on some of the lighter soil types it has handled this hard going and pushed out a head when the Maxi is struggling to do the same.
